Nothing in the way of ridiculous and absurd legislation can equal what is known as the cow ordinance, recently passed by the Taxing-District Council. Its absurdity lies not merely in its exemption of the citizens of the Ninth and Tenth wards from its operation—which renders it unconstitutional and of non-effect as partial legislation—but in the results that are likely to follow upon its enforcement. Either the cows of the Ninth and Tenth wards must have sense enough to know when they reach the boundaries of the other wards or they must be ries of the other wards or they must be followed by herders who do. If by herders, then their owners can afford to have them driven to pasture, instead of being a nuisance and an annoyance and a constant expense and an annoyance and a constant expense to the other being the county jail, will be argued before him. to their neighbors.
